

Zionists Gearing up for Gaza Incursion

Zionist officials have called 7 Oct there 9/11 as Hamas and other resistance groups launched an operation from the land, sea and air against 'Israel'. Hamas fighters made it 15 miles into the Jewish entity taking over military bases, police stations and many hostages. The audacious invasion shocked 'Israel' with many trying to board flights out of 'Israel'. The Palestinian resistance took over 150 hostages, the biggest loss for the entity. As 'Israel' prepares for invasion of the Gaza Strip, Western leaders condemned Palestinian resistance as terrorism. The Muslim rulers aside from statements of peace and de-escalation did little. 'Israel' now faces the prospect of urban warfare and mass casualties despite its militant strength.

'Israel' says, It Has No Evidence Iran was Involved in Hamas Attack

'Israeli' officials said they have no evidence that Iran was involved in the Hamas attack on southern 'Israel' after a report from The Wall Street Journal claimed Iranian officials helped plot the operation. "We have no evidence or proof" that Iran was involved, 'Israeli' Defense Forces (IDF) spokesman Maj. Nir Dinar told POLITICO. Dinar left open the possibility that Tehran was linked to the attack, saying, "Just because you don't have that evidence doesn't necessarily mean Iran isn't behind it." Rear Adm. Daniel Hagari, another IDF spokesman, made similar comments. "Iran is a major player, but we can't yet say if it was involved in the planning or training," Hagari said. The Wall Street Journal report claimed Iran gave Hamas the green light for the attack during a meeting in Beirut last week, but Barakeh said no one from the central command or the political bureau of Hamas was in the Lebanese capital last week. He acknowledged that Iran has previously aided Hamas but said since the 2014 Gaza war, the group has been manufacturing its own rockets and training its own fighters. Barakeh said he was surprised that the attack, dubbed "Operation Al-Aqsa Storm," did so much damage to 'Israel.' "We were surprised by this great collapse," he said. "We were planning to make some gains and take prisoners to exchange them. This army was a paper tiger."

Growing Number of Ukrainians Oppose Fighting

A recent poll found that the number of Ukrainians who want to fight Russia until the end of the war has fallen to 60%. President Volodymyr Zelenskyy has tight control over media in Ukraine, and his regime has targeted dissenters against fighting the war. The Gallup survey results released on Monday shows support for "fighting until the war is won" has fallen to 60% from 70% last year. The number of Ukrainians wanting to seek a diplomatic resolution has increased from 25% to 31% over the past 12 months. Support for finding an end to the war is strongest in the regions where fighting is ongoing. The waning approval of fighting comes as Ukraine's summer counteroffensive resulted in substantial casualties and minimal territorial gains. Kiev's Western backers knew the military operations were unlikely to succeed and would result in high casualties. In August, the Washington Post reported the counteroffensive's failures had blunted morale.
