

Sudan Will Not Be Saved Except by the Establishment of Khilafah

News:

After three devastating years of brutal fighting between the corrupt on both sides of the conflict in Sudan, several news outlets and health organizations report increasingly widespread disease and famine in the country. At the same time, recently publicized satellite imagery has shown the massive extent of the damage to Sudan's fertile agricultural lands.

Comment:

According to several news outlets and international health organizations, contagious diseases are spreading rapidly in Sudan, and an estimated 21 million people are lacking health services. Malnutrition is on the rise, especially among children, with millions now categorized as acutely malnourished.

Muslims who have already fled their homes amidst the brutal fighting between corrupt traitors of the ummah on both sides of a conflict bringing only devastation to the people, now find themselves displaced yet again, fleeing famine and disease.

Millions depend on scarce and unstable aid in a country long known as the regional breadbasket with the potential to feed not only the people of Sudan itself but a significant portion of Africa.

Recently, satellite imagery publicized by Aljazeera has shown the massive extent of the damage to Sudan's agriculture, further underscoring the catastrophic consequences of the war. Fighting has scorched vast areas of the country's most fertile plains.

Such has become the state of the Ummah in the absence of sincere political leadership for the Muslims. The treacherous nation states and corrupt warlords spare not the blood, honor, children, or sanctity of the innocent Muslims; nor is anything growing and good, nor stone or tree spared from their total corruption on the earth.

In a country, which Allah has blessed with every richness and resource, as well as a young, strong, and steadfast Muslim population, sons and daughters of this Ummah are facing starvation and disease after years of killings and aggression.

Yet, as with Palestine and all other lands where Muslims are suffering, the best response we have seen from the Muslim armies is silence, while the worst among them are direct accomplices in the crimes!

Have we not seen enough innocent blood spilled?! Have we not heard enough screams from bereaved Muslim mothers?! How many children must we watch starving without the armies of the Ummah coming to their aid by removing the corrupt political systems that serve only colonialist interests?

The crisis in Sudan and the broader crisis of the Ummah will never be solved until the corrupt nationalist regimes, who serve foreign powers while neglecting or crushing the people, are toppled and replaced by the rightly guided Khilafah State (Caliphate) which will activate the resources of the Ummah to look after the interests of the people according to the Book of Allah and the Sunnah of the Messenger (saw).
