The Outcomes of the Royal Committee to Modernize the Political System “Add Fuel to the Fire”

(Translated)

On Sunday, 14/11/2021, the government has referred the 2021 draft amendments to the Jordanian Constitution, the draft election law and the law of political parties to the Lower House, to complete the constitutional measures for approval. These legislations are the product of the Royal Committee to Modernize the Political System formed by a Royal decree and a Royal assurance of their outcomes.

The recommendations of this committee have been met with discontent, multiple divergent opinions, and widespread controversy among the people. The results of a survey conducted by the Center for Strategic Studies at the University of Jordan on the Royal Committee to Modernize the Political System showed that only 31% are optimistic about its outcomes, i.e. 69% of the Jordanians do not expect anything new from its outputs.

The Royal Commission came out in one of its recommendations to emphasize the need to strengthen the collective national identity and said that it is the identity which “integrates everyone and is one of the basic conditions for building the national democratic model”, which had received diverse and multiple opinions and accusations in terms of indigenous citizenship and abandoning the right of return, which is the argument, diversion and distraction of local public opinion, the regime in Jordan wanted in the midst of its quest for the perpetuation of its survival and the implementation of the colonial projects in the area by a parrot-fashion repeating the two state solution. This is while US forces are deployed across the country and different cooperation projects with the Jewish entity are growing including buying water and gas and consecutive agreements that entrench enabling this entity.

If this is the case, which is indisputable among the people of Jordan, that this regime has not existed since the Jordanian entity was established by the Sykes-Picot Agreement, except for these tasks to enable Jews and the Kafir British and American colonists in Jordan and its people and loot its resources and to consecrate its capabilities in service for the enemies of the Ummah, so that the residents of Jordan have reached serious levels of poverty, misery, humiliation and thirst, and the actual occupation of their country, under the titles of investment, alliance, partnership with the colonists, war on ‘terrorism’ and the debt of the IMF; if the case is so, then why the distraction and the controversy over the outputs of committees the least that can be said about them is that they “add fuel to the fire”, for the purpose of distracting the Ummah from its great project and its unification under its Islamic State and the application of Allah’s law in which the glory, dignity and the real elimination of the Jewish entity, and expelling the Western colonist and the utilization of its own wealth which Allah bestowed upon it.
